YOU OUGHTA KNOW

fast and furious

It's noon, and all you want to eat is a value meal. But could your appetite be killing you?

Let's be honest: Fast food is good. And all the news about how bad it is for us is kind of annoying, and it's starting to get boring. For every 250-pound girl you know who eats fast food, there's probably another one who eats a Whopper and fries every day of the week, without gaining an ounce. But don't let locks deceive you: The ingredients in fast food can wreak havoc on the way your internal organs function—and on your life. In recent years, the number of kids under 19 diagnosed with type 2 diabetes (a condition that used to mainly affect adults over 30) has skyrocketed. Why? Because it's a fat-related illness, and 15 percent of teens (that's 4.8 million of your peers) are overweight—which is triple the rate it was in 1980. And that's why this is something you need to know.

This Big Mac has more than just the fat you should eat in a day.

clogging fats and refined sugars, which our bodies use up so quickly that we end up eating way too much. And according to Jairo Rodriguez, M.D., a clinical nutritionist in New York City, people can become addicted to fast food. "People start

DRIVEN & COURAGE

on the court & course

Many teachers are coaches after school, but most have experience with the sport they have been selected to teach. However, Coach Winnie Wilkins had just a few months to learn the game of golf and coaching her skills. Coach Wilkins, an experienced coach of many sports, including basketball and volleyball, found a serious challenge from the beginning she knew this would be a challenge, but she was also willing to take on. "I immediately knew that coaching golf was going to be an interesting experience, since my girls were hitting all the shots when the sport had just started," said Coach Wilkins. "Coach Wilkins is an enthusiastic and supportive coach to all of us on the team. Her coaching practice is all to do with us," said Coach Wilkins. In fact, when she asked her assistant Coach Laura Marston to assist with a similar situation. Not only was the game of tennis sure to Coach Wilkins, it was her first experience ever coaching a sport. "We started with many of the same obstacles as Coach Wilkins. After hitting enough balls to learn the sport and get to know her team, she has coached the sport and been playing more actively each day. The tennis team is continuously changing year to year, but there has always been one constant since Wilkins began this journey. Laura said, when she was an "Underdog" has been part of the team since the very beginning. Having someone who will strive to be better than you, she has been a huge asset to the team as well as to Coach Wilkins. "I had no idea how to play tennis and she has managed to make me such a great tennis and team player on and off the court. She has taught me many valuable life lessons that I will use throughout my life. I will truly miss her," said Laura Marston. "I have to say that with all her players, but Laura has been more than just a tennis player, she has been more than just a tennis player. I consider Laura a daughter since she was the first player I ever met," said Coach Laura Marston. Taking on a new endeavor and pushing through obstacles certainly creates many more than the sport itself. It is a fact that both Coach Wilkins and Coach Marston are role models to their teams. They have always available to be playing and making new challenges in their sport and life in general. Coach Wilkins is thankful to be a part of the team that she has coached and she will continue to be a part of the team that she has coached.
